FUNNY BONE

As an early Christmas present, a man gets a talking parrot from his friend. He takes the parrot home and puts it in his living room. But every time the man goes near the living room, he hears the parrot shouting insults at him. In desperation, he puts the parrot in the freezer.

After a few minutes, the insults stop. Thinking he might have killed the parrot, he takes it out of the freezer. The parrot is still alive, but it is shivering. It stammers, "I'm s-sorry for b-b-being s-so rude. P-p-please forgive m-me." So the man forgives him. After a while the parrot asks, "What exactly did the turkey do?"

The pro football team had just finished their daily practice session when a large turkey came strutting onto the field. While the players gazed in amazement, the turkey walked up to the head coach and demanded a tryout. Everyone stared in silence as the turkey caught pass after pass and ran right through the defensive line. When the turkey returned to the sidelines, the coach shouted, "You're terrific!!! Sign up for the season, and I'll see to it that you get a huge bonus." "Forget the bonus," the turkey said, "All I want to know is, does the season go past Thanksgiving Day?" Asked to write a composition entitled, "What I'm thankful for on Thanksgiving," little Timothy wrote, "I am thankful that I'm not a turkey."

An industrious turkey farmer was always experimenting with breeding to perfect a better turkey.

His family was fond of the leg portion for dinner and there were never enough legs for everyone. After many frustrating attempts, the farmer was relating the results of his efforts to his friends at the general store get together. "Well I finally did it! I bred a turkey that has 6 legs!" They all asked the farmer how it tasted. "I Don't know" said the farmer. "I never could catch the darn thing!"

To all those who are, it appears, suddenly concerned about the plight of homeless veterans vs. Syrian refugees, I ask this: How many veterans are you taking in this winter, feeding at your home for Thanksgiving or giving money or warm clothes to? Is your concern genuine? Did you worry about vets prior to Nov. 13?

Is that American values when you turn your back on the words that are engraved on the Statue of Liberty: "Give me your tired, your poor, Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free..." So much for the home of the brave.

As a veteran, I am disappointed by the comments being made in newspaper forums by Americans who would turn their backs on Syrian refugees needing help when they are escaping the threat of war and ISIS. These refugees, mostly families of women, children and yes, even some males, who would be thoroughly checked out by our Homeland Security and Immigration Services of the government before being brought here, for most likely, temporary refuge. These people making these cowardly cries that call for turning our backs on people, many who are Christians, who desperately need our help. Any veteran who has served abroad as a serviceman or woman, should be appalled.

Hillary Clinton wants to make changes to our healthcare law. Hasn't enough damage been done with the implementation of Obamacare? Some insurance carriers such as United Healthcare and Humana are sustaining large losses and are threatening to withdraw from Obamacare. Let Obamacare die a natural death and permit states to use Medicaid and related programs to help those that need financial aid for healthcare.

OK, what happened to the home of the brave? All you politicians, stop being cowards about refugees. You are embarrassing.

I have a son who is deployed, I am new to this and was wondering if anyone had any suggestions on gift giving ideas? Thank you

I too had a problem after spending a couple of weeks in the hospital in OKC. within a month, every loan company it seemed from the country began calling my cell phone and I too now am more suspect than ever after reading the recent Sound off that maybe there is an issue with information given. I would hope not but there are more and more people that I have talked to that after stays in hospitals their phones are ringing off the hook. It just seems a bit suspect. Thank you for sharing.

We have raised a nation of spoiled non thinking, non caring people who live under the idea that everything is acceptable. Look at Facebook, the media and all the other media outlets that promote all these things that I growing up would have never even been allowed to see! Take a look at what your kids are seeing, it is pretty shocking to sat the least at what they now have access to at the click of a button. If it is this bad now, I cannot imagine just how out of control it will be in say ten more years. We are becoming a lost society I am afraid.

This is to my precious soul mate: Happy birthday Sherrie, love Dale. Thankyou

I have had recently a legal matter with a local attorney. He is associated with a prominent firm. This attorney, I feel was incompetent in the handling of my case. He was childish and immature and certainly did not act like a man but more like a spoiled brat, then filed a motion to withdraw from my case as my attorney, thank God for that. he did nothing for my case. I think if an attorney withdraws from your case and the case is still pending, the fee should be returned. When I mentioned this to the attorney that is head of the firm he said "no way", so much for lousy attorney's.

The paper needs to commended for finding the waste in the public schools. These reporters now I feel, need to go two blocks down the street and check out the city hall and check out the waste that I feel has been done on the streets and the rising costs for things that we have already paid for and why the streets are falling apart again before we even have used them. It is time somebody did something about the city hall too. I feel many of them have been in there too long.

NO I have to no need to continue or want but it is a must for others. If I had my way.....

Hospice Helps Patients and Families Focus on Quality of Life

Hospice of McAlester Makes More Meaningful Moments Possible

McAlester, OK – November is National Hospice and Palliative Care Month and hospices across the country are reaching out to raise awareness about the highest quality care for people coping with life-limiting illness.

"Every year, more than 1.5 million people living with a life-limiting illness receive care from hospice and palliative care providers in this country," said J. Donald Schumacher, president and CEO of the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization. "These highly-trained professionals don't only provide quality medical care. They work to make sure patients and families find dignity, respect, and love during life's most difficult journey."

Hospice is more than traditional healthcare. Hospice and palliative care programs provide pain management, symptom control, psychosocial support, and spiritual care to patients and their families when a cure is not possible. Hospice and palliative care combines the highest level of quality medical care with the emotional and spiritual support that families need most when facing the end of life.

Through this specialized quality care, we see many patients and their families experience more meaningful moments together. Hospice helps them focus on living despite a terminal diagnosis.

"One of the most important things that happened when we first met with the hospice staff members was peace. After they left our home, we both felt such peace about our decision. We read out loud from the hospice manual so we both would understand better where we were in his illness. The next morning we were able to sit and talk about all the hard issues before us and share them together rather than each of us alone. Again, we felt the presence of such peace - peace that only God could provide, but he used hospice to bring it. In the days that followed, I don't know what I would have done without the support and services of hospice. We felt each person had been handpicked by God to be there by our sides. Thank You and God bless all of you."

-Patient's Wife

Throughout the month of November, Hospice of McAlester will be joining organizations across the nation hosting activities that will help the community understand how important hospice and palliative care can be.

USDA Awards $2 Million for Nutrition Education and Obesity Prevention Research

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) today awarded $2 million in grants to support research on nutrition education and obesity prevention for disadvantaged children and families at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville and Utah State University. The funding will help create two additional Regional Nutrition Education and Obesity Prevention Centers of Excellence (RNECE), established through the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) and Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP). "Childhood obesity rates in America have tripled over the past three decades," said NIFA Director Sonny Ramaswamy. "While we are beginning to see promising signs of progress with the epidemic leveling off in children, these grants will help evaluate and strengthen existing nutrition education and obesity prevention efforts to help ensure this progress continues." The awards include: University of Tennessee at Knoxville (UT) will receive $1 million to strengthen SNAP and EFNEP nutrition education programs for low-income families. The Center will focus on reducing obesity by analyzing programs to identify facilitators, barriers, best practices, training and evaluation needs. UT will develop and disseminate resources tailored to the needs of those delivering SNAP-Ed and EFNEP interventions and adapt and disseminate readiness-to-change resources to strengthen organizational, community and neighborhood coalitions and provide resources to increase intercultural competence in SNAP-Ed and EFNEP implementation. Utah State University in Logan, Utah will receive $1 million to compare EFNEP and SNAP-Ed program participants and non-participants with a variety of ethnic and racial backgrounds across five states. This research will improve USDA's ability to evaluate, create and maintain effective nutrition education programs that result in healthier food choices and increased physical activity for participants. These lifestyle changes will lead to improved health and reduced incidence of disease and disability, reducing costs to individuals and the nation's healthcare system. "With one-third of our nation's children overweight or obese, this issue stands out as one of the greatest health challenges facing our country," said USDA Food and Nutrition Service Administrator Audrey Rowe. "As we invest in our nation's health it is important we leverage partners and innovative strategies to help children from low-income families grow and develop into healthy adults." The RNECE were established in 2014 with one research institution in each of NIFA's four administrative regions and one National Coordination Center. The Centers are the result of a partnership between USDA's Food and Nutrition Service (FNS), NIFA and the participating universities. Through these research centers the agencies expect to develop evidence-based data to support best practices that mitigate issues leading to obesity, particularly among poor and underrepresented groups. SNAP-Ed was initiated in 1992 and is administered by participating state SNAP agencies in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Guam, and the Virgin Islands. SNAP-Ed is delivered by nearly 100 implementing agencies including land-grant universities in 47 states, public health departments, food banks, non-profit organizations, and others. EFNEP was started in 1969 and is administered by 1862 and 1890 land-grant institutions in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and six U.S. territories. FNS administers 15 nutrition assistance programs. In addition to SNAP these programs include the Special Supplemental Nutrition

Scammers

The McAlester Police Department and Pittsburg County Sheriff's Office have received over a dozen calls this week alone concerning the IRS Tax Scam. This is probably the most common scam that we are seeing right now. After doing some research, this scam has been going on since 2013 and thousands of people have fell victim to this. Basically how this works is:

- Scammers use fake names and IRS badge numbers. They generally use common names to identify themselves.
 - Scammers may be able to recite the last four digits of your Social Security Number.
 - Scammers spoof the IRS toll-free number on caller ID to make it appear that it's the IRS calling.
 - Scammers sometimes send bogus IRS emails to some victims to support their bogus calls. Do not open these Emails.
 - You will hear background noises of other calls being conducted to mimic a call site.
 - After threatening you with jail time or driver's license revocation, scammers hang up and others soon call back pretending to be from the local police, and the caller ID supports their claim.
 - The Scammer then demands immediate payment by credit card or consequences will be jail.
- As a rule, the IRS contacts those who owe on their taxes first by mail or with personal visits from field agents. Real IRS agents never insist on payment by debit card or wire transfer. They also don't ask for credit card numbers over the phone. If you get a phone call from someone claiming to be from the IRS, do not give them any information and hang up.

•If you know you owe taxes or you think you might owe taxes, call the IRS at 1.800.829.1040. The IRS employees at that line can help you with a payment issue—if there really is such an issue.

•If you know you don't owe taxes or have no reason to think that you owe any taxes (for example, you've never received a bill or the caller made some bogus threats as described above), then call and report the incident to the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration at 1.800.366.4484.

•If you've been targeted by this scam, you should also contact the Federal Trade Commission and use their "FTC Complaint Assistant" at FTC.gov. Please add "IRS Telephone Scam" to the comments of your complaint.

We have also received numerous calls this week in reference to the grandparent scam. The scammer calls and tells you that they are your grandchild, and actually use one of your grandchildren's names. They will either tell you that they are in another state or country and are having some kind of legal issues and you must send them money now or they are going to jail. Do not give these people money. Call your grandchild or other family members and verify where they are.

Tip of the week: While out shopping this holiday season, be very conscious of where your purse or wallet is. Thieves are targeting people that are shopping and have their purse in their shopping cart. They wait until you are distracted or take your eye off of it and then they grab it and run. If your shopping cart has a seatbelt in the child seat part, run the strap through your purse strap to help secure it. This could be just enough to keep the thief from getting away with it.

The Polar Express Train Ride-Nov 20, 2015 to Dec 27, 2015

Make this Christmas absolutely magical when you take the Polar Express in Bristow. For a limited time, the Eastern Flyer becomes the Polar Express Train Ride giving families a chance to experience the beloved Christmas children's book in real life. You'll take a round-trip ride to the "North Pole" and experience all kinds of festive activities along the way. Everyone is encouraged to wear their pajamas on the train just like in the book, and hot cocoa and cookies are plentiful during the ride. The train cars are decorated for the holidays, and kids will enjoy a reading of "The Polar Express" while music from the popular animated film is played. When the train reaches the North Pole, Santa and his elves make a special appearance and lead everyone in singing some favorite Christmas carols. Each child will receive a silver sleigh bell from Santa himself. The train leaves and comes back to the historic train depot in Bristow in about an hour and guests are on the train for the duration of the event.

The Polar Express Gift Shop at the depot also has plenty of ornaments, toys, t-shirts and other souvenirs to pick up. You'll remember this great Christmas activity for years to come.

There are three different kinds of tickets. The Diamond Class includes premium seats with an upper dome car that features wide windows for viewing the North Pole as well as a commemorative Polar Express mug. First Class passengers will be seated around vintage equipment and receive the mug as a gift too. Standard Class has traditional rowed seating in double-decker cars. Everyone in every class gets a shiny golden ticket and the sleigh bell from Santa. One Railroad Pl - Bristow, OK

Cattle's Best Bet Against Disease; Genomics-Based Research Project Will Deliver Two New Vaccines

VANCOUVER, BC--(Marketwired - November 24, 2015) - Infectious diseases continue to be a leading cause of sickness and death in livestock and are of concern to human health due to their potential to be transferred to people. Vaccination is the most cost-effective means of preventing infectious disease in animals and humans, but its application to livestock is still limited, and the lack of effective vaccines contributes to the excessive use of antibiotics in animal health.

A new research project funded by Genome British Columbia (Genome BC), Genome Canada and other partners endeavours to use 'reverse vaccinology' to develop vaccines for Johne's disease and bovine tuberculosis in cattle. These diseases result in annual losses of more than $86 million and $10 million, respectively, in Canada and billions annually worldwide.

Cattle, led by the University of British Columbia's Dr. Bob Hancock and the University of Saskatchewan's Dr. Andrew Potter, is funded for $7.3 million and anticipates the start of field testing for the vaccine within the project's four-year time frame.

"The process of reverse vaccinology provides a much more efficient and effective method of developing vaccines, through the parallel identification and expression of every possible antigen, while simultaneously screening for vaccine potential," says Dr. Bob Hancock, Professor, Department of Microbiology and Immunology, UBC. "Another key facet of the project is investigating public perceptions and industrial readiness, the commercialization strategies and regulatory framework and support systems."

The major deliverables of this project will be two new vaccines for important diseases influencing the food and dairy industries, companion diagnostics that will differentiate vaccinated from infected animals, and a white paper to inform the public, producers, industry and government on the options and strategies for dealing with these important cattle diseases.

"Genome BC's earlier investment into this project through our Strategic Opportunities Fund enabled the team to take a first step -- producing antigens -- that demonstrated that their reverse vaccinology approach would work," says Dr. Alan Winter, President & CEO of Genome British Columbia. "It is gratifying to have both regional and federal investment into this important research because it will make a difference in ensuring a safe and healthy food supply for future generations."

The vaccines developed through this project will benefit dairy and beef cattle farmers, the public who utilize their products and the commercial sector, both in terms of marketable vaccines, increased food and dairy product output, and international trade. Direct economic losses to livestock producers are large, but these are dwarfed by the losses associated with international trade restrictions as has been seen in Canada with mad cow disease, avian influenza and other diseases. The project was funded through Genome Canada's 2014 Large-Scale Applied Research Project Competition: Genomics and Feeding the Future. Other funding partners include the Vaccine and Infectious Disease Organization-International Vaccine Centre (VIDO-InterVac), the University of Saskatchewan's Office of the Vice-President Research, and the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute.

U.S. oil company shakes up quake plans after Oklahoma temblors

Nov 24 Phillips 66 has overhauled how it plans for earthquakes, a sign U.S. energy companies are starting to react to rising seismicity around the world's largest crude hub in Cushing, Oklahoma.

The changes include new protocols for inspecting the health of crude tanks, potentially halting operations after temblors, and monitoring quake alerts.

The revisions, fully implemented in 2015 and first detailed to Reuters this past week, appear to mark the most significant acknowledgement by a major energy company that its seismic procedures were recently updated.

They also come as some researchers say tougher standards for energy infrastructure such as pipelines and tanks could be needed to handle an uptick in quakes since 2009 in Oklahoma.

Scientists have tied a sharp increase in the intensity and frequency of quakes in Oklahoma to the disposal of saltwater, a normal byproduct of oil and gas extraction work, into deep wells. Oil fields have boomed in Oklahoma over the past decade thanks to advances in hydraulic fracturing and horizontal drilling.

A 4.7 magnitude quake struck in Oklahoma on Thursday, the strongest temblor there since 2011. About a month earlier, a 4.5 magnitude quake hit near Cushing. Regulators responded by calling for nearby disposal wells to shut or curb intakes.

Phillips, a refiner, has 167,000 barrels per day of pipeline capacity and 700,000 barrels of storage tanks at Cushing, home to about 57 million barrels of crude and a nexus for U.S. supply, according to a 2015 investor presentation.

Though its new protocols apply to all its U.S. infrastructure, when asked specifically about potential Cushing risks, Phillips said its "seismic response protocol was developed as part of our enhanced geohazard program, which addresses geotechnical, hydrotechnical and seismic hazards."

To be sure, most oil companies test the integrity of tanks on an on-going basis and many told Reuters their tanks are built to the latest construction standards and building codes.

But some scientists are questioning whether standards should be tightened.

Geologists led by D.E. McNamara of the USGS said in a September academic paper that including human-caused quakes in the National Seismic Hazard Model, a reference for engineers, "would result in serious implications for design standards."

Currently, man-made quakes are also not accounted for in tank standards published by the American Petroleum Institute (API), an industry group, and design loads from the American Society of Civil Engineers. Strong quakes in regions outside Oklahoma have split steel as rolling ground motion puts the weight from the liquids on one side of the tank, known as "elephant footing," said Thomas Heaton, a professor at California Institute of Technology. Engineers told Reuters most tanks in

Cushing rank in Seismic Use Group 1, the weakest classification in API standards. TransCanada Corp said its seven Cushing tanks are in SUG 1. The largest quake in Oklahoma was 5.6, a level with potential to damage tanks. Tanks normally have containment berms to catch leaking oil. "Anything more than a 5.0 you have to worry about a little more," according to Muralee Muraleetharan, a civil engineering professor at the University of Oklahoma.
