FUNNY BONE

The Case of The Imaginary Dogs

My niece was dragged into court by a neighbor who complained about her barking dogs. At one point, the judge asked the neighbor a question. The neighbor didn't reply. "Sir, are you going to answer me?"

The neighbor leaped to his feet. "Are you talking to me?" he asked. "Sorry; I can't hear a darn thing." The case was dismissed.

What Does DUMB Stand For?

While serving jury duty, I noticed that the defense attorney seemed a bit nervous. At one point, he picked up a piece of evidence and asked his client, who was on the witness stand, "I see an acronym on this receipt. What would CAR stand for?" The defendant replied, "Car."

Trappiest Place on Earth

A man won an $8,000 settlement from Disneyland after he got stuck on the It's a Small World ride. He said he'll use the money to cut out the part of his brain that won't stop playing "It's a Small World After All."

I Don't Say "Hey" Pro Bono

A lawyer e-mailed a client: "Dear Jennifer: Thought I saw you on the street the other day. Crossed over to say hello, but it wasn't you, so I went back. One tenth of an hour: $30."

A Little Too Literal

If you're interested in becoming a lawyer, you'll need a degree. But as these court transcripts reveal, the question is, in what? Attorney: "How was your first marriage terminated?" Witness: "By death."

Attorney: "And by whose death was it terminated?" Witness: "Guess."

Attorney: "Doctor, how many of your autopsies have you performed on dead people?" Witness: "All of them. The live ones put up too much of a fight."

As one who lives in southeast Oklahoma, I want to THANK the Bargain Journal for all their help and Public service to US, the workers, who live pay day to pay day providing food and shelter for our family and love ones. This is truly our paper!! Thank You!

It has been all in vogue recently for everybody to bray like an ass (and here I am referring, not to a portion of one's anatomy, but to an animal, a species of the genus Equus, you know, a donkey) about the decline of civilization in general, and to focus on this or that deplorable aspect of the collapse in particular: unpatched potholes in the pavement, police brutality, unchecked substance abuse, governmental ineptitude, atrocious disparity of incomes between the rich and poor, etc. Well I should like to suggest that we keep it in proper perspective. Let's cut the crap, let's be honest and not delude ourselves; civilization is a sham, a hoax, a fraud—with the possible exceptions of a very few, a mere handful of entities such as for example the YMCA, the public libraries, and the postal service, virtually all civilized institutions and conventions are rackets: organized criminal activity. Civilization has not benefitted the human race one tiny little bit. We are ALL OF US still just as savage and barbaric now as we have ever been. In the past several thousand years mankind has not made even one inch of forward progress—if anything we have actually deteriorated. Civilization has been a failed experiment. We were better off when we were hunter/gatherer nomads. All I have to say to civilization is, don't let the door slam shut on your donkey on the way out...

After the slum site McAlester News Rebuttal on Facebook started their smear campaign against Chris Morris, I began to wonder why anyone would go out to smear someone without cause. Then I saw the picture of the site owner and who is he standing beside? The man that is running against Mr. Morris, then it made sense. I say vote for who you want but don't hide behind Facebook to pull dirty politics. How sad and I was going to vote for the other guy. Not now.

when did it become such a popular thing in journalism to fudge a story to sell more papers? Oh, I forget it has always been that way. When a wife beaters words are taken as the truth then it is time to shut down the presses and turn off the lights.

Well I spent my last ten dollars on a chance to win the big lottery, I didn't win but I learned a valuable lesson having to walk to work for two days until I got paid again. Not a lucky person I guess.

I want to sound off about the Krebs Police Department and the city of Krebs DA/city attorney. The police department pulled over a family member of mine and arrested them for SUPPOSEDLY having a suspended driver license. This was on a Saturday evening. On the following Monday morning I pulled his driving record which stated his license was valid. I figure there was a glitch in the system, no big deal explain it in court. The city attorney said in court we needed more info so we asked for a trial date. Mind you the city of Krebs already had the $15.00 dollars for the fine because that was the bond to get out of jail. We purchase the complete driving record and take it to court at which time we are advised if we go through with the trial and are found guilty they will suspend their driver license !!! To me that is extortion !! Either shut up, pay the fine, and go away or risk a REAL suspension. No respect for these kind of criminals !!!

Dear lighter thief, Woman I know you took my lighter. Return it, or I swear I'll re arrange your pantry so you can't find stuff! May the fleas of 1000 camels infest your armpits. Sincerely, Woman wearing war paint.

Just remember when you sleep with snakes you get bit. If you bed with someone whose reputation is shot and is known as a trouble maker even in many churches in our area, it is best to back away and stay away from those type of people.

I would like to say something about your current Miss McAlester's Outstanding Teen. We were at the to go pizza place and my adopted grand daughter noticed her coming out of the store and asked if she could talk to her. The young lady (gorgeous by the way) bent down to get eye level with my grand daughter and in the sweetest voice told her "aren't you a beautiful princess". The young lady took the time to visit with my grand daughter for ten or more minutes, telling her she was adopted too and that made her more special because she was chosen to be loved. I cannot tell you how that small visit changed my grand daughters outlook towards being adopted. McAlester, you have one special young lady there and I can never thank her enough for making a difference in our lives.

I have known the people that run the MNR site on Facebook and I can assure you that no matter where the man goes or what he does there is trouble. From churches to organizations he has been involved in there has been trouble. I get nervous every time he is around. Just be careful who you put your trust in, it could ruin your reputation too.

I have been watching the Journal's posts about the new Emergency Room planned and I could not be more pleased with the progress with the McAlester Regional.

U.S. researchers call for WHO to take rapid action on Zika

U.S. researchers called on the World Health Organization on Wednesday to take swift action on the mosquito-transmitted Zika virus that is linked with thousands of birth defects in Brazil and is rapidly spreading in Latin America and the Caribbean. Georgetown University researchers urged WHO Director-General Margaret Chan to heed the lessons of Ebola and act quickly. Specifically, they called on the U.N. agency to convene an emergency session of health and infectious disease experts to consider how to respond to the outbreak. Just convening the meeting would focus attention on funding and research, they said in a viewpoint article published on Wednesday by the Journal of the American Medical Association. The Zika virus has been linked to brain damage in thousands of babies in Brazil. There is no vaccine or treatment for Zika, which is a close cousin of dengue and chikungunya

Until recently, it was seen as a mild disease, but concern rose after the recent discovery of a possible link to birth defects in some affected countries and also to Guillain-Barré syndrome, a rare but serious condition that can cause paralysis. Recent models for how the disease is spreading predict "significant international spread by travelers from Brazil to the rest of the Americas, Europe, and Asia," Dr. Daniel Lucey, an infectious disease expert, and

Open Data from USDA, Microsoft Cloud Technology Become Tools to Strengthen Food Supply Through "Innovation Challenge" Winners

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack and Microsoft officials today announced the winners of the USDA-Microsoft Innovation Challenge, in which contestants used USDA agriculture production open data to develop online tools that can help make the American food supply more resilient in the face of climate change.

"In yet another example of how public and private resources can be leveraged together to address significant global concerns, the winners of the USDA-Microsoft Innovation Challenge have used open government data to create an impressive array of innovative tools to help food producers and our communities prepare for the impacts of climate change and ensure our nation's ability to provide plentiful, affordable food," said Agriculture Secretary Vilsack. "For more than 100 years, USDA has compiled data on the farm economy, production, and the health of crops around the country, and it is exciting to see such modern, useful tools spring from these information sources." The Challenge was created in support of the President's Climate Data Initiative, which aims to harness climate data in ways that will increase the resilience of America's food system. USDA provided contestants with more than 100 years of crop and climate data through Microsoft Azure, Microsoft's cloud computing platform.

"Combining the advantages of cloud computing resources with the government's desire to provide open access to public data is likely to transform scientific research and business innovation," said Dr. Daron G. Green, the Deputy Managing Director of Microsoft Research. "Microsoft's partnership with the USDA evidences how public-private partnership can stimulate new applications, explore novel scenarios and, in this case, work towards a more resilient and sustainable food production."

A total of $63,000 in cash and prizes were awarded, with winners selected from more than 346 registrants and 33 submissions from around the world. The award recipients announced today, and their projects, are: Grand Prize, Open Source Application Award, and Best Visualization in Time or

Oil Companies Holding On: Deloitte Says M&A Deals Down 53%

The expected tsunami of mergers and acquisition activity throughout the energy sector based on prolonged, record low commodity prices has yet to manifest, and data from Deloitte suggests it may come along later than sooner. In the year-end report on deals for 2015, Deloitte opened with a wry, "Wait and see continues".

What exactly are companies waiting for? The experts say fears that prices could go even lower, rendering assets even cheaper, is one issue for the C-suite. On the flip side of that, struggling companies are hoping for a turnaround that would negate the need to sell assets to raise cash. Consequently, a wave of mergers and acquisitions (M&A) engulfing all sectors isn't likely soon. "That's the big question: At what price do you transact at? There has been some narrowing of the gap, but still there is - I don't know if you'd call it optimism - that things would turn around and would come up,"

Melinda Yee, a partner in Deloitte's M&A practice and one of the report's authors, told Rigzone. Upstream companies saw the most activity, but it was still the least action in the sector since 2012. Similarly, during the "Great Recession" of 2008-2009, exploration and production (E&P) was the most active representing two-thirds of the deals and half the deal valuations in aggregate. Total deal count declined from 709 across all sectors in 2014 to 379 in 2015. Deals were also smaller and more tactical last year. An increase in activity is likely to be more sector by sector, she said. "We've got a pretty low level of activity, so if it doubled, it would be close to highs we've experienced before, so it's like you can only go up in terms of activity," Yee said. But today, the industry's environment is different from that of 2008 and 2009. "We had prices dip, but then they came back relatively quickly," she said. "This time around, you've got shale playing a larger - is a larger piece of the puzzle when it comes to production and you've got other dynamics in place with Iran coming online and some of these other factors with OPEC not cutting back on production, such that you're more likely to see more of steady pace from a price change perspective as opposed to one that's going to sharply spike up, although with production being cut back, there is some discussion as to what happens in 2017." In 2015, companies took alternative approaches to saving cash. Some companies terminated employees or sought new efficiencies. Upstream mergers and acquisitions (M&A) activity is forecasted to increase in 2016 as hedging contracts expire and lenders face their limits on equity. Still, the cyclical energy business is known for its rebounds. "The industry has always found a way to survive and to innovate and to adapt to the circumstances. We know that companies are very inwardly focused right now, and looking at different strategies and looking at where they can right-size the organization," she said, adding that producers are fine-tuning processes and renegotiating their services and transportation contracts. "The industry has to work together for everyone in terms of emerging from this stronger," she said. Artile courtess of Rigzone
